

Exec Tech

WORTH YOUR SCREEN TIME

THE TORNADO THAT FITS IN YOUR POCKET

In the future, when we're all flying spaceships into the sun, we won't need smartphones because we'll have been microchipped at birth. But in the meantime, it's worth noting that Britain – not China or the US – has invented the world's slimmest smartphone. Kazam's 348 Tornado (holder of the Guinness World Record, y'know) is barely thicker than an After Eight. Precision-engineered from aluminium and £300 cheaper than an iPhone, futuristic features include gesture controls, a year's free screen replacement and 'Rescue', which lets Kazam remotely fix your device. It's enough to bring a tear to Isambard Kingdom Brunel's eye. £250; kazam.mobi

GLOWING COAT

The Visijax Commuter Jacket keeps cyclists safe at night. By lifting an arm to signal a turn, you will cause the jacket's motion-sensitive LED lights to flash like amber left/right indicators on a car. £100; halfords.com

SPEEDO WATCH

Hands up who needs a watch with a mechanical speedo? Nobody. But Brevé's Génie O3 Speedometer is very cool: tiny spinning cups measure windspeed – thus the speed of your boat/convertible. £35,585; breva-watch.com

MACGYVER CHIC

The world's manliest bracelet? Leatherman's Tread Multi-tool packs 25 tools into a wristband, including a glass breaker and a wrench. £130 (due autumn); leatherman.com

NEW 3DS

Nintendo has added a control stick and extra shoulder buttons, but it's the improved 3D and better performance that really mark this new 3DS handheld out as something a bit special. £150; nintendo.co.uk

APPS OF THE WEEK

MARCO POLO

You can now locate your iPhone using the sound of your own voice. Shout "Marco!" (or any word you care to programme in) and your phone shouts "Polo!" back. Mishaps are fun. 79p; findmarcopolo.com

HASSLE. COM

As in, this app solves the hassle of cleaning up after yourself. It'll match you with a verified Mrs Mop. And it's ethical; the cleaner gets the money – not a yuppie in a Barrett mansion. Free; hassle.com